

My name is Garrett Devaney, and I am a Business Administration student at Georgia Tech concentrating in Information Technology Management. As an undergraduate, I have worked hard to maintain a good GPA while engaging in several organizations on campus. In my time at Tech, I have served as Treasurer of the Georgia Tech chapter of Uplifting Athletes, working to expand organizational outreach and raise money for rare diseases. Additionally, this past semester, I have conducted research within Georgia Tech's Electrical and Computer Engineering department to assist with securing communication networks within the Department of Defense. As an Army ROTC Cadet at Georgia Tech, I have gained valuable leadership experience and look to apply my skills as a future Army Officer. I recently received news that I will be Battalion Commander of the Georgia Tech Army ROTC program next school year, and I look forward to leading cadets in order to build the program into one of the top ROTC battalions in the United States. Upon graduation, I would like to serve either in the Cyber or Military Intelligence divisions of the Army.

Very Respectfully,

Garrett Devaney
